Hello Anne,

Thank you for your email.

When sourcing materials, we always look for the best pricing and options for our customers. In your case, our installer sourced your product at a cost savings, which was reflected in your change order and out-of-pocket expenses.

Regarding the schedule, we do not anticipate exceeding the timeline noted in your recent change order. Please note that factors such as city inspection corrections, scope changes, payment delays, and late material selections can all impact the project timeline. We are committed to completing your project promptly, so your timely coordination on outstanding items is appreciated.

With respect to the paint corrections you mentioned, these will be addressed when the rest of your home is painted, if warranted. Completing all painting at once is more efficient than spot repairs. Diego will also inspect your window and ensure any needed repairs are completed.

A weekly call is a great idea. Diego will coordinate this with you for the remainder of your project to ensure all items are addressed. As Diego is managing your project, he will provide a full schedule once your material selections are finalized so we can proceed with the remaining work.

Separately, we have not yet received your bank wire. Could you please confirm if it has been sent? Payment delays may impact the project timeline. I will be invoicing again next week for your out-of-pocket expenses.

Have a great evening, as we look forward to completing your home project successfully.

Best regards,

Hi Charles, Gary,

If the answer about the tile and countertop cost rolled into Change Order 5 is not available yet, I understand, but can you let me know about the rest, and also if the cost info is being looked into? I do realize that the tile wouldn't have been ordered during the sale because I had to provide it last week, but it's pretty similar per sq ft. to the prior selection that Gary told me would be $$$$ if I wanted it installed in chevron pattern (which is why I changed it after that conversation on July 2).

Thanks,
Anne

Hi Charles,

I signed this, but did find myself delayed by a few days in thoughts/questions that I didn't think would be readily answerable regarding some of the numbers. Namely, I know you told Daniel on our call that you just do not make materials costs transparent or provide receipts (or maybe that was Gary speaking, but either way...)

My question with the countertops and flooring is, we provided those selections when there was a 25% off 4th of July promotion at Floor & Decor, which had at least several days left to it. There may have alternatively been a 30% rebate for orders over $5,000 but I can't find retrospective confirmation of that. Those considerations were important to me in selecting things, as they naturally are with any major financial moves - of course I'm going to try to be the smartest about my spending, such as sourcing used high-end appliances to give me a real bang for my buck and a nice statement in design.

Can I be assured that those items were ordered to take advantage of the 25-30% savings, and that that savings is being applied directly to my costs before you add back your 20% for overhead and profit? As noted, I signed this in the interest of avoiding delay that would be blamed on me, but I would like to get this answer before I need to sign off on the hardwood floors.

Finally, on the subject of delay - can I get an explanation for why we breezed past the prior 3 week extension (July 10-31) and have added another SIX weeks? No changes in scope or plans have occurred, that I am aware of, since we had the July 10 deadline (even though scope changes were mentioned on the last change order or accompanying email, I can't quite remember - but there really weren't any then either. It just didn't absolutely require comment at that time, wouldn't have changed anything). But nevertheless I am now looking at September 11. There haven't been many days where people are onsite. This absolutely CANNOT continue, especially when we have known outstanding items that need to be rectified from earlier which I've been told won't be looked at until the rest is done (broken window, corrections needed to paint job, etc.)

Maybe it would be advisable to set up a brief weekly check-in call for the remainder of the project? Let me know how we can make sure y'all are finished by September 11 because I have travel the following week which I never dreamed could be impacted by a move date.

Thanks,
Anne

Hi Charles,

I have a check ready for $32,000.00 from the escrow account, and have initiated a wire for the rest from my other bank account since, as I mentioned, the remainder of the construction fund won't be released to me until final inspection.

I'll leave the check at the house later on today.

Thanks,
Anne

I can't seriously imagine you would pay for any goods or services either, without knowing what you were supposed to have received for the payment - ??

The math is very quick to check - just the sum of five numbers, times 1.2 — at least per our latest conversation. I don't doubt that your accounting department has clear evidence of their math - you should be able to figure out the discrepancy on that end, as well as easily provide me some kind of documentation that adds up to what you expect me to give. There has got to be somebody, somewhere in the company who arrived at that number and is willing to describe their process to you.

Daniel should probably be your contact for the remainder of this discussion.

Hi Charles,

As noted, I am having to send this from two separate accounts, as the mortgage bank hasn't released additional funds from the escrow account yet (which would be needed to reach the total of today's payment).

Important: In your initial email, you requested $38,159.84. I understood the explanation of the $20,000; I mostly understood the explanation of the $3000, but at any rate I'm fine with the description as I presume that $3,000 doesn't show up in future; and the last set of charges was the sum of line items 5, 6, 7, 9, and 10 from Change Order #2, plus 20% for Dry1Out.

- I added up those rows and I got $15,979.92.
- Adding the other $23,000 gets $38,979.92.
- Invoice #6780972 totaled the lines from Change Order #2 as $16,917.96, leading to a total of $39,917.96.

With these three possible totals, I'm just going to go with the one that has underlying figures behind it, which is mine - $38,979.92.

The bad news: I am not able to do the wire from Columbia Bank until Monday. There's an exception on their site affecting only certain cases, which this is. So I'll have to go into their one and only local location, in the Financial District in downtown SF. (How convenient and definitely not costing $25 minimum just to park.....)

I wanted to update before I missed my self declared due date again, though.

Thanks,
Anne

Hello Anne,

Please reach out to State Farm to request an extension regarding your project timeline. Gary will provide the anticipated completion date for your home, as we have encountered some delays due to recent scope changes, Etc.

Additionally, Gary will be speaking with the stucco team again to ensure the mulch is replaced, as previously requested. He will also inspect the plumbing, as our understanding is that this work has already been completed.

I will be submitting a supplement for the drawings to State Farm to determine if coverage can be provided. Please note, as discussed, there are no guarantees regarding this coverage.

On a separate note, please ensure timely payments so the project can continue to progress as planned. We will be sending another invoice shortly.

Thank you for your attention to these matters.

Hi Gary and Charles,

With 11 days left until the current contract end date, and no cabinets, appliance installations, flooring, paint, or moving information that I know of (for my items in storage), I was assuming we'd need another housing extension, yes?

My adjuster at State Farm is now Austin Wells (844-458-4300 ext. 60147) - Jessica Toth doesn't have my file anymore. He emailed me to ask about this on Friday, and I said that I was thinking I would need it but couldn't say how long. I suggested he reach out to you on Monday, but I would also suggest you do the same so that you're likely to make connections at the earliest opportunity.

I let him know that Charles had planned to get with him about having them cover the $12,800 for plans (and permitting?); and that Gary would be the one most likely to be able to speak definitively about a new end date for the project. Since we will need to funnel the extension approval (I hope!!! that nothing prevents that from being granted) through Sedgwick for action, and then we need to count on my hotel having the space to let me stay, time is of the essence on that one.

Plumbing action needed: I saw that the drywall is up, but the water line that we labored over so much, for the fridge in its new location, has not been put in. Is it scheduled? I'm just holding space for the possibility that schedules were so difficult between the drywallers and the plumber that they had to do it in this order, and the plumber is aware he'll need to cut an access hole and then patch it afterwards...whether that's likely or not, could happen...(?) I thought it deserved a mention.

Finally, more for your purposes than anything else, I thought you should know that the plasterer did not come by last weekend to clean up like I thought he was planning to. Daniel has cleaned extensively in that area since then, and the white plaster water on the fence is all but gone. The only thing left was white discoloration on patches of mulch, which I'm not sure much can be done about besides picking out the worst and scattering/mixing up the darker material so you can't really tell. What I mean to say by this is that he doesn't need to come here just to eat humble pie if he won't know much to do. So if you want to make sure he makes it right with you for a correction in your relationship, a different kind of gesture might be an idea.

Thanks,
Anne

As noted, I am having to send this from two separate accounts, as the mortgage bank hasn't released additional funds from the escrow account yet (which would be needed to reach the total of today's payment).

Important: In your initial email, you requested $38,159.84. I understood the explanation of the $20,000; I mostly understood the explanation of the $3000, but at any rate I'm fine with the description as I presume that $3,000 doesn't show up in future; and the last set of charges was the sum of line items 5, 6, 7, 9, and 10 from Change Order #2, plus 20% for Dry1Out.

- I added up those rows and I got $15,979.92.
- Adding the other $23,000 gets $38,979.92.
- Invoice #6780972 totaled the lines from Change Order #2 as $16,917.96, leading to a total of $39,917.96.

With these three possible totals, I'm just going to go with the one that has underlying figures behind it, which is mine - $38,979.92.

The bad news: I am not able to do the wire from Columbia Bank until Monday. There's an exception on their site affecting only certain cases, which this is. So I'll have to go into their one and only local location, in the Financial District in downtown SF. (How convenient and definitely not costing $25 minimum just to park.....)

I wanted to update before I missed my self declared due date again, though.

Thanks,
Anne

Hi Charles,

I understand your position in terms of roles at your company and what they are expecting. However, I just can't see any responsible justification for why I should pay amounts that are not clearly derived. That's not something that's been asked by any service provider I've ever hired or would hire. I can't seriously imagine you would pay for any goods or services either, without knowing what you were supposed to have received for the payment - ??

The math is very quick to check - just the sum of five numbers, times 1.2 — at least per our latest conversation. I don't doubt that your accounting department has clear evidence of their math - you should be able to figure out the discrepancy on that end, as well as easily provide me some kind of documentation that adds up to what you expect me to give. There has got to be somebody, somewhere in the company who arrived at that number and is willing to describe their process to you.

Daniel should probably be your contact for the remainder of this discussion.

Thanks Charles for reaching out - I was drafting an email earlier this morning but got pulled away until 8:30pm and couldn't actually make the payments and send it as complete. I'm most likely not going to get to it tonight, but tomorrow morning.

On Sunday I reached out to the person in charge of the escrow account to ask for another distribution of funds (there's not the full amount in my available account now), and she got back to me yesterday to say that what is left in reserve, they are going to keep until the final inspection is passed. So I'll send what is there, and need to organize which account I want to use for the remaining balance going forward. Tomorrow I'll send wires from both banks, so it will be split.

Thanks,
Anne

Hi Charles,

I think it would be beneficial to talk live about this and a couple other items. Would you all be available for a Zoom meeting this afternoon at 1:00? Sorry it's late notice, I've been trying to arrange things through the meeting I'm currently in. I think the best way to get all on one page is to all discuss it at the same time. Please suggest another time if necessary.

I've also added Daniel back to this chain, who I took care to introduce in my last message. Please keep those in copy who I add going forward.

I could have been a little more detailed in my introduction. Daniel is not just someone who's staying in the back. He's my partner in this house, he has full decision power, and he can be considered the same voice and authority as me. If you can reach him easier than me, or run something by him when he's at home, go for it.

Thanks,
Anne

Hello Anne,

I have attached your signed documents, as we are invoicing in accordance with the terms outlined in the Contract. To provide additional clarity, I have included some further information below regarding the details of this invoice.

Please note the following:

- Invoices are issued per the contract and for any change order work performed.
- For each approved change order, we will invoice 50% of the total amount upon approval.
- Timely payment of all invoices is crucial to ensure your project progresses smoothly.
- Line items #1 & 2 reflect your original signed Contract on page #1.
- The change order progress payment reflects line items #5,6,7,9 & 10 plus 20% OH&P.

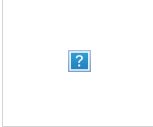

We kindly request that all invoices be paid as soon as possible. If you have any questions or require further clarification, please let me know. Additionally, we would appreciate confirmation of when we can expect payment.

Thank you for your attention and cooperation.

Presuming Anju = Anne — this repeat reply doesn't really tell me anything more complete than the last (and along the way the numbers have changed, too).

As with the last change order communications re: the plumbing, I'm lost for how else to word what I think is a very simple request for routine job documentation. It feels like I've agreed to play pretend, to act like any actual transaction of information has happened, but I didn't and don't agree.

I was asking for the sources of the amounts charged - trades involved, allocation of Dry1Out labor, your 20% profit line, tax, line items forwarded from the subs, e.g. materials, their labor, etc., alongside the date and purpose of the work; and so on. It would explain how you arrived at the numbers.

Can I have an invoice like what I've described? I'm looping in Daniel, who has been staying on site in the back unit and has ample expertise to discuss many kinds of business like this. If it's easier to show him where the answers are than me, please use that route by all means. He's also keeping up some reporting/trackers for me, and it probably will help to put you all in contact.

Thanks,
Anne
